Miss Dorothy McCandless First Salem Girl To Fly Solo; Seeks Further Honors

Attains Goal She Sought
Since First Trip At Age of Five

By RUTH OBENOUR
"If there's a gleam in her eye," so the song says, it's love, but if she happens to be pretty, brown-eyed and answers to the name of Dorothy, it's ten to one that it's flying.
Dorothy McCandless, daughter of Mrs. Chauncey McCandless and the late Dr. McCandless of South Lincoln ave., has been going around with a gleam in her eye for some time—since last July 17 to be exact—and the reason for it dates from her first flying lesson, taken then.

The light in those brown eyes nowadays, however, may be laid to the fact that a few days ago, after completing eight hours of dual instruction, she successfully took her first solo flying test.

Not that many others have not done the same thing, she explains, but, as the most eagerly awaited day in every flying student's apprenticeship, it meant that she was succeeding in doing something she had longed to do since her first plane ride with her father and grandfather when she was five years old.

First Salem Girl To Fly Solo
Passing the solo tests the other day gives Miss McCandless the distinction of being the first Salem girl to fly solo. The tests, which she took flying a Taylorcraft 65 from the North Benton airport, where she has taken all her instruction, consisted of 25 minutes flying time, 15 with the instructor, 10 without, three takeoffs and four landings.

She remembers that her instructor, after flying some minutes with her, told her to bring the ship in and take it up herself. When she climbed out and she taxied up to the other end of the field to take off by herself, she says she was a little nervous but she was so busy remembering the things she should and shouldn't do that she didn't have time to wonder whether she could do it.

The young student flier hopes to continue soloing until she has flown the required 15 hours to get a solo license. The solo permit she holds now enables her to fly within a certain distance, always coming back to her home port. The solo license would permit her to land at any other licensed field in a certain radius, while a private flying license would give her the right to land at any licensed field in the country and to carry passengers, although not for hire.

More Licenses
To carry passengers within a radius of 10 miles or so, she must secure a limited commercial license and to fly passengers for hire without restriction, except the regular air traffic regulations, she would need to win the commercial flying license.

Miss McCandless, one of many young aviation enthusiasts in the city, most of whom are of the opposite sex, feels that there is no great future for women in the field of regular commercial flying. The public, she points out, has not earned to have as much confidence in the woman pilot as in the man, even though she may be fully as competent. Some specialized branch of commercial flying will

BRITISH AGENTS FACE CHARGES

Nazis Accuse Secret Service Men of Setting Hitler Bomb

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER
BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Two captured British secret service agents were blamed today by German authorities as direct links in the Munich bomb explosion which missed Adolf Hitler by 11 minutes Nov. 8.
Officials declared the agents were responsible for the beer hall blast jointly with George Elser, a former Munich resident said by the Nazis to have confessed setting the time bomb, and Otto Strasser, German exile who lives in France. The two agents, listed as Captain Richard Henry Stevens and Sigismund Payne Best, were seized at the Netherlands frontier Nov. 9. German secret police, who have questioned them since then, declare that Capt. Stevens is chief of the European division of Britain's secret service.
Previously the German Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler, had not linked the two Britons directly with the bombing, but had announced that Elser planned the Munich time-bomb at the instigation of Strasser with British funds.

This Really Does Make It Lot Easier

SANDUSKY, Nov. 22.—A notice on page 1 of the Sandusky Daily News asked that Thanksgiving celebrants who expect to "mix alcohol with gasoline" do the paper a favor today:
"If you insist on partaking of strong waters before you start driving your car, please drop around and leave the facts and dates of your altogether-too-brief stay here below so they will be handy for your obituary."

DESPERADO TO DIE IN CHAIR

Jack Russell Is Convicted By Federal Court Jury In Slaying of Salesman

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—A Federal court jury convicted Jack Russell, 39, Oklahoma desperado, of kidnapping and killing William Scott Hamilton, 23, Arkansas City, Kan., salesman, and recommended the death penalty today.
The jury reached its verdict after 8 hours and 33 minutes of deliberation, at 6:52 a. m., and returned it before Judge Charles E. Woodward shortly thereafter.
A choice of acquittal or conviction with or without the death penalty recommendation, was before the jurors. Interrupting their deliberations once at midnight, they requested and received a copy of a 26-page statement Russell made, and which was read at the trial, relating details of the crime.

Russell fled from the Oklahoma state prison at McAlester, where he was serving 10 years for robbery, last July 11 and during the ensuing week kidnaped Hamilton near Pittsburgh, Kan., and killed him, he admitted, near Ringwood, Ill., July 14.

He was recaptured in a tourist camp near Cass, Ark., on July 15, just a week after his wild flight began for the purpose, he testified, of getting back to Chicago to see his wife, Mary, whose love he feared he was losing.

$300 FOR SKATING POND APPROVED

Action Taken by Council; Varied Street Problems Discussed

City council met Tuesday night to wade through a stack of business items, none of outstanding importance, however.
Three of five ordinances passed transferred a total of $325.36 from departmental funds to the general fund to take care of a state employee retirement fund deficit.

Two other measures transferred $200 and $100 from the fuel and light and stationery funds, respectively, to incidentals funds.
Councilman-at-Large A. P. Morris, reporting on the request of the city park commission for a $500 appropriation for skating improvements at the West End pond, recommended that council approve a $300 allocation for the improvements, not to include the proposed grading of the pond. His motion was seconded by Councilman Emmor Taylor.

Plan Street Improvement
Council gave its approval to the purchase of a 3659 lot at the corner of Ohio ave. and E. Pershing st. for the purpose of taking a sharp turn out of E. Pershing at that point. Plans for the repair have not been definitely established. An ordinance for the fund transfer will be drafted for the next meeting.

Council approved a motion by Members Morris and Taylor instructing Service Director Frank Wilson to improve N. Ellsworth ave. in front of the Stark Transit depot where old street car rails protrude above level of the street and also to repair the old Benton road crossing of the recently abandoned Stark Electric railway line.

It was decided to cover the rails as a safety precaution after E. P. Sever of Piqua, one of the purchasers of the railway agreed to let the city have all rails remaining.

YOUTH ATTACKS EAST PALESTINE MAN IN HOLDUP

HIGHWAY PATROL HALTS HIS FLIGHT

Library, Pa., Man Fined, Gets Six Months, In Lisbon Hearing

Accused of striking J. H. Baumann, 51, East Palestine gasoline station attendant, over the head with a piece of iron pipe, in an unsuccessful holdup attempt at 4:15 p. m. yesterday, near East Palestine, Wendle Goodwin, 19, of R. D. 1, Library, Pa., was arrested a short time later near Washingtonville by State Highway Patrolman D. H. Cole, of Salem.

Notified of the holdup attempt, and that Goodwin was heading in this direction, Cole went out to meet him, saw him coming and crowded him off the road. Goodwin offered no resistance and was removed to the county jail in Lisbon.

Asks For Service
Goodwin, who said he was enroute to Chicago in search of a brother-in-law, stopped at a station just east of East Palestine and had Baumann, service the car with gasoline and oil.

When Baumann's back was turned, Patrolman Cole said, Goodwin struck the attendant over the head with a 15-inch length of pipe. J. V. Mackall of East Palestine, who operates the station, was at the bull's plant at the rear of the station and heard the commotion.

When he ran up Goodwin jumped in his car and sped westward. Mackall placed the unconscious Baumann in his car and gave chase. Near Unity, Mackall telephoned the sheriff's office at Lisbon, who in turn, notified the state patrol barracks here.

Six-Month Sentence
The youth was turned over to Sheriff H. L. Gosney and arraigned before Justice M. K. Zimmerman at Lisbon on a charge of assault and battery. Pleading guilty, Goodwin was sentenced to the county jail for six months and given a fine of $200 and costs.

Mackall, meanwhile, brought Baumann to Salem City hospital where he was treated for a deep scalp wound and then taken home.

The youth was behind the bars exactly one hour and twenty minutes after the crime was committed.

Goodwin told the officers he left home with 50 cents in his pocket and admitted intending to make use of the pipe to obtain gasoline on his trip westward.

Corp. W. E. Arce, head of the local patrol, said the youth was paroled recently from Huntington reformatory in Pennsylvania where he had served sentence for assault and robbery.

GRIDIRON FOES AWAITING GUN

Weatherman Comes Out of Huddle with "Fair, Warmer" Prediction

Besides turkey, Thanksgiving tomorrow brings football. It's the big day of the season for gridironed folks who'll rally at Reilly stadium to see again the football warriors of Salem and Alliance High school battle on the gridiron.
For 43 years now they've been at it, and tomorrow's encounter, with its forward passes and end sweeps, will be just as spirited, just as hotly contested, as those of Spanish-American war days when the center-rush and the flying wedge were quite the thing.
Regardless of the mechanics, the idea is still the same.

Kickoff At 2:30
The kickoff is scheduled at 2:30 p. m.

Despite the gloowering skies today, Faculty Manager Fred Cope smiled brightly when the weather man came out of his huddle and formally announced: "Fair, with rising temperatures," for Thursday. If the weather man sticks by his original signals and doesn't gum them up with an avalanche of snow, like he did a year ago, a big crowd will be on hand for the "battle of Reilly stadium."

Alliance Aviators are big and tough, and they're rated 14 points better than the Quakers, but this is an old-time "feudin' affair," steeped in tradition just as deeply as any Kentucky mountain brawl.
Carl Schroeder's Quakers aren't saying much, but they looked mighty good last Saturday, even in defeat. They're gunning for a fancy named Hume, who does some fancy running for the Aviators. If they can put the hobbles on the blond Alliance quarter-back—"well, we're not saying what we're going to do," the local gridironers point out, "except that this is the last game and it'll be the best we have!"

THE REALM OF PROBABILITY

Since the union of Stalinism and Hitlerism, scarcely anything seems outside the realm of probability. Perhaps the next surprising get-together will be Russia and Japan. Announcement that the two governments have agreed on a commission to settle the Mongolian-Manchurian border dispute is a straw in the wind.

As in the case of agreement between Russia and Germany, however, any meeting of Russian and Japanese minds must be marred from the outset by suspicion. Japan's difficulties in China, where it is trying to overcome Russian influence, cannot be made to disappear by the wave of a wand any more than Germany's problems in the Balkans and Poland can be settled by signing certain agreements with Russia. The realm of probability has been expanded to include many things formerly outside, but still is not wide enough to include genuine candor between nations that are natural enemies. Agreements for expediency cannot make enduring allies; the League of Nations proved that and, more recently, so did the Rome-Berlin axis.

Japanese-Soviet rapprochement, evidently in the offing, must be heavily discounted in advance.

THE 'USUAL' CHARGE FOR SERVICE

Food stamp enthusiasts who have been saying under their breath that the idea can't be as good as it looks are flabbergasted by what's happened in Rochester, where the experiment began last spring. The government is threatening to abandon the whole setup.

Rochester grocers and merchants were reported deeply in love with it. Relief clients purchased orange stamps with their own money and were given 50 percent of the value in blue stamps free. In exchange for the latter they received foodstuffs distributed by the federal surplus commodities corporation. The amazing thing about it was that consumption of food in Rochester increased by approximately 10 percent. Other cities inquired about the plan. It began to look like one place where something for nothing really worked.

But bankers, who accepted stamps from grocers as cash deposits, decided a service charge was in order—one percent. If they go through with it, says the government, the plan will be scrapped. The bankers are firm; they intend to go through with it beginning Dec. 1. Something for nothing is in trouble over the "usual" service charge.

STORY WITH A MORAL

The maze of maneuvers behind Adolf Hitler and the rise of National Socialism befuddles even those who have threaded it, but observers all agree that Fritz Thyssen, steel magnate, carried most of the plums in his head.

Herr Thyssen, now living in Switzerland, is credited with selling Adolf Hitler to German industrialists and with furnishing much of the money needed by National Socialists when they were struggling to become the majority party in the reich.

He was Germany's most powerful industrialist, and he thought his country's salvation lay in finding the right man on horseback. Herr Thyssen intended, of course, to hold the horse. He wasn't the first power behind the throne to make that fatal error in judgment.

His difficulties with the Hitler regime are vague, but they are tangible enough to cause him to be living abroad—where he can't hold Hitler's horse. The moral: Never put a politician on a horse until he's dead and then let a sculptor do it.

THE PRESIDENT TELLS THE JOKES

His countrymen appreciate President Roosevelt's sense of humor. They hope nothing happens to it.

His little joke with the press about third term speculation probably can stand repeating a couple more times before it wears out. It has got laughs twice already, once at a press conference, once on a national hookup.

There's just one thing to be remembered. The President thinks up the third term jokes; the press only tells them. Third term ribbing isn't his idea of humor. If the truth were told, it calls for Molly's tag line on the radio—"Taint funny, McGee."

group at the dinner. Other parties included 12 guests of Mrs. Jacob Hole and five friends of Miss Margaret Pow.

In a private dining room in the Pioneer block, 30 friends of Mrs. W. D. Casselberry were her guests at a 6 o'clock dinner Thursday. The tables and room were beautifully decorated with festoons of smilax and red McKinley carnations. The place cards and favor flowers, with the beautiful silver and cut glass, made this one of the most attractive dinners given this season. The menu was in charge of a specially appointed committee of the Home for Aged Women.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, November 23

A LIVELY day, on which the personal, domestic, social or affectional obligations are paramount over more sordid and ambitious engagements, is forecast. There may be much stirring-about and excitement in connection with the happy routines, but there is a possibility of some deceptions, treachery or some other malicious manifestation, possibly in relation to employees or elders. Shun rash, impulsive or extravagant indulgences.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which the personal pleasures of living seem to overshadow the workaday. Much social, domestic, affectional or artistic liveliness is indicated, despite some duplicity, malevolence or crafty opposition. With proper restraint, much happiness and success are possible.

A child born on this day may be talented in unusual ways, perhaps in art, music, drama, or in the social graces. It may have elements in its nature to invite malicious or deep-seated opposition that will be hazardous to its success.

For Friday, November 24

MODERATELY enterprising and propitious conditions obtain on this day, according to the lunar transits. While new matters and dealings with those of influence and prestige should thrive, there are indications of certain undermining forces, boring deep from within with implements of treachery and subtlety. Alertness to these, even in domestic or personal affairs, may avert financial loss.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a fairly progressive and propitious year, if they will develop new projects with soundness and practical programs. These may enlist the support and confidence of those able to assist or promote them liberally, vanquishing certain subtle and persistent undermining forces.

A child born on this day may have fine constructive ability and executive power, winning support from influential persons against the menace of subtle opposition.

"NAVIGENTS"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Great Britain's plan to expedite American exports to neutral countries may aid her in checking any flow of American goods to Germany.

The arrangement, announced yesterday by the British embassy, provides for issuance of certificates to exporters showing that consignments are "unobjectionable" to the British. The certificates, called "navigents," will be issued by British consulates beginning Dec. 1.

The system amounts to a pre-examination of cargo, and is designed to prevent delays involved when British contraband patrol's search vessels for contraband. It will operate on American shipments to 10 neutral countries—Belgium, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, Iceland, Italy, Latvia, The Netherlands, Norway and Sweden.

One authority predicted today that the British would maintain a central control over the system in London. He declared that the British probably would keep an up-to-the-minute compilation of goods covered by the navigents.

If American shipments to any neutral should increase substantially above normal, he explained, the British might assume that the neutral was permitting their trans-shipment to Germany and might decline to certify further shipments.

The British sea blockade virtually prevents trade directly with Germany, and the new system thus might be effective in curtailing American shipments reaching that nation by way of neutrals.

Although the British program will be voluntary, exporters generally were expected to accept it as a sort of insurance against the stoppage of American goods by British warships.

Diabetic Surgery Is Quite Safe Now, Says Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Is a surgical operation dangerous when the patient has diabetes? Interesting developments are taking place in practical surgery. They do not include any startling discoveries or advances in research work. Rather, they consist in the perfection of technique by individuals in some one particular line.

Surgery of the heart is an example of this. The general principles of surgical attack on the heart are no different from those employed in every branch of surgery—the use of anesthesia, either general or local, the means to stop hemorrhage, the insistence on rigid asepsis. The difference consists in the fact that a surgeon skills himself to perform delicate and dangerous procedures with which other surgeons are not familiar.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The surgery of diabetes also falls into this class. Before the discovery of insulin, surgery on a diabetic was an extremely dangerous procedure. But the opportunity of the use of insulin has changed all this and made diabetic surgery quite safe.

Three types of operations must be considered by the surgeon who is consulted by the diabetic patient:

First, the surgery of urgency. The diabetic who has a ruptured appendix, or a perforated stomach ulcer, or who has been in an automobile accident, is entitled to surgical relief, diabetes or no diabetes. Fortunately, with modern methods and proper choice of an anesthetic, these operations are just as safe in the diabetic as in his non-diabetic fellow-man.

Second, the operations that arise as a part of the course of diabetes itself—carbuncles, diabetic gangrene, etc.

Third, operations of election. In the old days, the diabetic who had gallstones simply had to live with his gallstones. Nowadays he has a choice.

A fourth type of diabetic surgery, which consists in an attempt to increase the sugar tolerance by cutting off a portion of the pancreas, is still sub judice.

The Virus Diseases

What are the virus diseases? It has been suggested that the following conditions are due to infection with filterable viruses: smallpox, vaccination against smallpox, warts, chicken-pox, fever blister and shingles, yellow fever, rabies, infantile paralysis, encephalitis, mumps, psittacosis, granulated eyelid, common cold, influenza, measles and whooping cough.

Epilepsy In Childhood

Does epilepsy begin in childhood? Garrod found in a study of a thousand cases that 442 began before the age of 10. But convulsions in childhood are by no means always epilepsy. Parents are often frightened, by the occurrence of a single convulsion, into believing that their child is bound to a lifetime of epilepsy. Children have very sensitive brains and convulsions often occur in childhood from very simple things, such as a small rise in body temperature or indigestion.

"KNIGHT ERRANT"

by Jack McDonald

CHAPTER XVII

The buzzing drone of the capacity Saturday afternoon throng became suddenly stilled when Killian announced over the loud speaker: "Your attention, please, Miss Heather Mills' Knight Errant, now in the winner's circle, has just broken the track record for five furlongs, formerly held by Pasha. The time was 30 seconds flat."

The crowd broke into a cheer. Still stepping on clouds, Heather hurried to the cashier's window with her winning ticket.

Opening her white purse, she glanced inside the crumpled note that had come to her so mysteriously before the race. It seemed to glow at her.

Childishly, without counting, she crumpled the seventy dollars in bills into her purse. The smile had gone suddenly from her clear young face upon seeing the note again.

"I'm going to talk about this to Mr. Bassitt—now," Heather threaded her way through the crowd swarming the clubhouse and hurried to the stable at the south of the Bay Meadows track. The elation she had felt seeing Knight Errant win his first victory, and her sense of triumph over this strange new doubt concerning Bassitt.

But when she saw the black satin head of Knight Errant tossing eagerly at sight of her in his stall, she forgot all but pride in him.

She fed white cubes to the champagne creature, a handful at a time. Knight Errant ate like a gentleman, with soft lips nibbling harmlessly against her pink palm, and when all the sugar was gone, nudged her arm coaxingly for more.

She stopped, flushing with embarrassment to the brim of her white hat. Bassitt was standing by the stable door.

"Wasn't it too marvelous for words, Mr. Bassitt?" she exulted, forgetting Slim's note and all her doubts of Bassitt.

"I just knew he would do it. He's found his stride now. We must write Mr. Matt Winn this very night for a nomination blank to the Kentucky Derby."

With Heather in such an ecstatic frame of mind and Knight Errant threatening to kick the barn down out of sheer elation, Bassitt looked sadly out of place.

He realized he had to act as though pleased at Knight Errant's winning race, but he made a clumsy job of it, grunting "Fine, fine," several times, and then lapsed back into morose silence.

Bassitt didn't mind losing the few thousand he had dropped on Lightning Bug, but he had been saving Knight Errant for a big coup in the East, where he had the connections, and his plans for the colt had suffered a serious setback with his premature victory.

And the fact he had been crossed by his own rider certainly didn't help him in masking his glum feelings in Heather's presence. He was suspicious, but he was not certain yet whom to suspect.

"Why, Mr. Bassitt, you look ill," Heather exclaimed.

Bassitt made a grim effort to look happy again, but his smile was mechanical and forced.

"Just the reaction, I guess," he explained.

"I was almost beginning to lose faith too," Heather continued, patting Knight Errant's arched neck. "Even in you, Mr. Bassitt," she added, hesitatingly. "Only this morning I heard you were betting on another horse in the Knight Errant race."

In her elation Heather did not note the startled look in Bassitt's eyes. He was just at the point of defiantly asking where she heard such bunk when Heather gave him a reassuring glance and said, gaily: "Wasn't it stupid of me to doubt you? I should have known differently. Forgive me, won't you, Mr. Bassitt?"

"Sure," her trainer replied, and at the same time he decided he might as well take advantage of Heather's softened mood to recommend that Knight Errant be taken to Chicago after the short Tanforan meeting, which would end next week.

"We can decide that later," Heather parried.

Later that afternoon in the hurry and bustle which preceded post time for the Seabiscuit race, Slim Maynard, making his way along the passageway between the grandstand and clubhouse, heard a scornful feminine voice say:

"Wrong again, weren't you, Mr. Maynard?"

He turned to find Heather hurrying in an opposite direction and, though without rancor, he replied: "I'd like to be wrong every time if it will make Knight Errant be right," there was little chance that she could have heard in the babble of the crowd and the quick patter of her high heels along the runway.

A moment later, Slim saw Draper coming out of the riders' quarters with his eyes fastened to the ground.

"Bassitt tied the can on me," was Dimple's response to Slim's query.

"And besides, that was a fake telegram your friend Snapper Elliott showed me. I found out all about it from one of the boys in the press box."

"Well, what if it was?" Slim said dejectedly, half in defense. "Bassitt giving you the gate is the best break you ever got in your life."

Slim noted for the first time at close range the strong pair of hands on the boy and told himself Draper could become a good jockey if he ever connected with the right stable, applied himself and dropped his chummy attitude.

"Riding to orders like you've been taking from Bassitt is plain cheating, Dimples," Slim went on virtuously. "You want to become a good rider, don't you?"

"All my life I have, ever since I've been old enough to think about it," the boy answered, unexpectedly. He looked up at Slim, subdued and chastened.

Slim was astounded. His voice softened.

"Well, you surely got off on the wrong foot when you teamed up with Bassitt," he said.

"He's the only man I ever rode for," Draper gulped.

"You're the makings of a good rider," Slim went on slowly. "You have a good pair of hands. Why don't you use them? You shove a horse along like you thought rating had something to do with your standing in the community."

"You usually make four or five moves too many and when you could help a thing horse with a hard ride, you're so all in yourself that you're lucky you don't fall off."

Dimples was staring at Slim.

"Why, you've told me more about how to ride in the last minute than Bassitt has shown me all year," he said.

"Maybe you won't need to go back to the bushes," Slim encouraged, toying with an idea that came to him as he spoke. "If you want to you can ride Cold Cream and Susie for me and free lance in other races. I'll act as your agent for outside mounts, rustle around and get you some live horses to ride. And Snapper can teach you a lot about riding. He's forgotten more about it than most riders nowadays ever knew."

Snapper had been a great rider in his day, until he got so lazy he thought he was being imposed upon if they asked him to ride in a race of more than five furlongs. Dimples' eyes sparkled.

"Slim, I'll ride my head off for you."

"And I'll go along with you—win, lose or draw," replied Slim. "Only one thing. You've got to ride clean." He put out his hand. Dimples gripped it.

"Slim, it's a deal."

As Tanforan launched its spring meeting Slim Maynard took mental inventory of the showing made by the Versatile Stable, consisting of his two old jallopies, Susie and Cold Cream. It required no deft juggling of figures, for in the year that had passed since he and Snapper became co-proprietors of these two equine nuisances after the courtroom rummage sale, the combined batting average of the steeds struck a grand total of a cool .000.

Cold Cream was now six-year-old maiden. Give Susie her due. She did get fourth money once, but Slim had never cashed the $25 check for this tail-end portion of the purse money. He had it framed instead.

"You ought to raffle those two plugs off," Max Podlech, the railroad horseman, told Slim.

"If I do will you buy a chance?"

"Certainly not," countered Podlech. "It would be just my luck to win 'em."

"Watch Susie Tuesday," Slim warned. He had a hunch she might run better over the softly cushioned Tanforan strip than on the hard surface of Bay Meadows, so he entered his equine hussy on the spring meeting program.

Tanforan, pioneer track among the California racing strips, founded by the famous Prince Poniatowski, who married Beth Sperry, was Slim's favorite stamping grounds.

Riding Susie for Slim was Dimples Draper's first booting assignment since Charlie Bassitt had fired the boy the week before.

By coincidence Bassitt had a mare in the race named Madam Foo Foo. She was an 8 to 5 favorite this day and Susie a longshot.

While Slim was absent from the paddock, Snapper had some ideas of his own on the coming race.

"Now, Draper, you listen to me and we'll grab this purse right from under Bassitt's nose," Snapper began. "Susie's all the early speed of the race. But she'll weaken in the stretch, sure."

"Now, this Madam Foo Foo has a weakness, I know. I saw her run down in Texas last year. When she pulls up on even terms with Susie and starts looking her in the eye tell you what you do."

And Snapper whispered something into Draper's ear.

"Do what I told you and see what happens," was Snapper's parting advice as Draper hoisted himself into the saddle.

The race was run as Snapper predicted. Susie was out in front coming into the stretch, where her asthma caught up with her as usual, and Madam Foo Foo, a bold stretch runner, came thundering up on even terms with her.

In Those Days Men Were Attentive; This One Buried His Wife Four Times

(By United Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The story of the man who buried his wife four times; of the "hurdy-gurdy" girls of the Cariboo; who charged $1 a dance, and got it! of the days when a pound of butter cost $3, a pair of rubber boots $20 and a shovel $10; of the years when between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 were taken from the Cariboo mines annually, is told by Judge F. W. Howay, historian of British Columbia's colorful past.

Here is the tale he tells of the much-interred wife.

It was in the winter of 1858 that the pretty 28-year-old wife of J. A. Cameron died in the ice-bound goldfields. To the adoring 32-year-old husband, the gold-flecked soil of the Cariboo was not good enough to receive her body.

He packed it with snow and ice and it remained in a state of perfect refrigeration until the following spring when Cameron and his partner put the body in a tin coffin and between them canoed and portaged down the treacherous Fraser river and across the Gulf of Georgia with the precious burden to Victoria.

Poured In Whiskey

There a hole was cut in the coffin, and 25 quarts of over-proof whisky poured in and with appropriate ceremony with benefit of clergy, Cameron buried his wife.

Back in the Cariboo again he struck it rich and returned to Victoria within a year to exhume the coffin. Taking it with him he boarded a boat for Panama, crossed the isthmus in a cart, sailed north to New York and up the Hudson toward Canada, and finally buried his wife again in Cornwall, Ont.

There Cameron built a fine home and settled down to end his days in peace, but there was no peace for his wife. Town gossip whispered that the coffin contained stones, and that Cameron had traded her beauty to an Indian

Dials Are Explained To School Children

An important step in the Ohio Bell Telephone company's program of educating the Salem public in the proper use of the dial telephone has been started in the schools.

A large demonstrating dial is used to prepare the students for the coming change in the city's telephone system from manual to dial operation. The demonstrating equipment is in charge of an instructor sent out by the telephone company.

"This part of our educational program is highly important," said Carl F. Willman, Ohio Bell commercial manager.

"School children make a surprisingly large portion of the daily number of telephone calls. In addition to using the telephone to communicate with their friends, they often transmit messages for their parents."

"In all communities where we have inaugurated dial service, we have found that the great majority of the school children, with the fast minds of youth, are easily instructed. They are quick at grasping the important points and essential details. Being absorbed in the occupation of learning every day, their minds are in a receptive mood. Facts make an easy and lasting impression. The youngsters don't miss a thing."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent urinating, passing urine with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give kidney relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Employment Service To Aid In Yule Jobs

Many employers in Salem and vicinity report difficulty in securing qualified employees to assist in handling the Christmas trade. Conversely, many workers seeking employment during the holiday season may find it difficult to find jobs.

Both employers and workers may save much time by availing themselves of the services offered by the Salem office of the Ohio State Employment Service, 720 E. State St. The telephone number is 842.

All employers realize that interviewing applicants, reviewing applications, and weighing prospective employees' qualifications are important when hiring workers. The O. S. E. "We will be pleased to have one of our representatives call on any employer in Salem and vicinity for the purpose of cooperating in employment problems. There is no charge for this service," Manager Arthur S. Johnston said.

OHIO DAIRYMEN NAME OFFICIAL

J. C. Nisbet Is Executive Secretary; Well Known In Industry

The board of directors of the Ohio Dairy Products association has announced the appointment of J. C. (Jack) Nisbet as executive secretary of the association, local dairymen have been informed. Nisbet's appointment fills the vacancy caused by the death, early in September, of Fred L. Schoenberger.

Nisbet is well known in the dairy industry, but to the distributing and manufacturing branches of the industry in Ohio, is perhaps best known as a forceful and well informed speaker on dairy problems and for his articles as associate editor of Board's Dairyman.

Born in Wisconsin in 1901, he first learned the dairy business from his father, who had taught cheese making in Italy and Switzerland, and who made the only 100 point score cheese ever exhibited at the London Dairy show.

He was graduated in dairy husbandry from the University of Wisconsin in 1923, and managed farms and served as county livestock agent until 1928 when he became extension dairyman at Kansas State college. In 1930, he went with Hoard's Dairyman and has since served as associate editor, except for special leave to organize the farm and dairy records department of the University of Wisconsin.

For seven years of this time, he was also secretary of the Wisconsin State Dairyman's association where he started the widely attended production show program. His work with Hoard's Dairyman has included writing, research and study of dairy problems and making talks throughout the country, averaging 150-200 talks per year and covering 30 different states.

The board earlier stated that it felt the magnitude of the dairy industry of Ohio and the "sign of the times" justified an expanded program of service that would include better inter-industry cooperation and a sound program of building better relations with the consumer, the producer and government.

Father and Sons Gather At Lisbon

LISBON, Nov. 22.—The annual Presbyterian Father-Son banquet was held in the church last night with Rev. Rudolph Miller of East Palestine as speaker.

Rev. Miller's subject was "Exercises", physical, spiritual and moral. He urged that in addition to physical exercise, his hearers, "exercise themselves in spiritual goodness" through resistance to temptation, in overcoming evil. In so doing, one becomes "spiritually strong, making a good citizen, whereas following the line of least resistance certainly will lead to nothing but moral degeneration."

George Kuhns, president of the Men's Fellowship which sponsored the banquet, presided during the program, which included vocal selections by Miss Esther Binsley, accompanied by Mrs. Graham Kearney; readings by Miss Elaine Aikens; and trumpet solos, Miss Virginia Maxwell, accompanied by Miss Mary Maxwell.

Hitler Faces Tremendous Job Keeping Minorities In Hand

Must Apply Constant Force to Liberty-Loving Poles and Czechs, Who Are Ready for "Break"

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
Speaking of the Czech student revolt—

A bit over a year ago, just before Hitler's triumph at Munich, I sat in the great sports palace in Berlin and heard the Nazi chieftain deliver an ultimatum to Czechoslovakia for the return of German Sudetenland — an ultimatum emphasized by the rumble of gun-carriages and the beat of marching feet.

But while he demanded that the Germans and their lands be given back to the reich, he emphatically laid it down as a policy that "we do not wish at all to have other nationalities among us." Pursuant to that declaration, he added for the special benefit of British Premier Chamberlain, leading Anglo-French representative, this "guarantee":

"No Czechs!"
"We do not want any Czechs." I never shall forget the way Hitler said that. It was well along in his lengthy war-orator in which he had worked himself and his audience of 12,000 up to the highest pitch of emotion.

The words came tumbling out in a guttural torrent of such bitterness that you fairly could see him relaxing to accept the entire Czech race as a gift on a golden platter—like a Caesar thrusting aside a crown.

Well, he got his Germans back, and left alone the Czechs as a whole. I was with him when he sealed the pact and his "guarantee" to Chamberlain by entry into Sudetenland over flower-strewn roads. Less than six months later—in March of this year—Herr Hitler tossed over his shoulders his cardinal racial policy. He cracked up the rest of Czechoslovakia and bagged Moravia and Bohemia with their great Czech population. He took time to get his breath and then annexed a big Polish population.

Now he has on his hands the so-called student upheaval in Prague. A dozen Czech youths have faced German firing squads and martial law has been clamped on the country. 1,200 students are in concentration camps, and eight Czech universities and academies have been closed by the Nazis.

The importance of this revolt doesn't lie in any immediate danger to Nazidom, for they appear to have the thing in hand. In itself it doesn't presage any general trouble of this sort in Germany proper.

It seems, however, to show a weakness in the Nazi structure. There is a similar situation in Poland, where a host of liberty-loving people are being kept in hand by force.

It means that here at least are two racial minorities who are only waiting for a chance to break loose. It means that should the Anglo-French allies succeed in their efforts to start trouble in Germany, the Czechs and the Poles would be the first to join the revolt. It means that there is a constant ferment of discontent and hatred which might possibly affect other parts of Germany in time.

Constant Force Necessary
There must be a constant procession of force to keep these unhappy people under control. And always there is the dead certainty that they will take advantage of any great Nazi crisis to try to regain their liberty, thereby rendering the crisis doubly grave.

Hitler could have done few things calculated to cause the reich more internal trouble than the abandonment of his policy of restricting his acquisitions to the German race. Europe is full of minority problems which are a constant source of trouble and danger.

And the fuhrer couldn't have passed two peoples more likely to cause him difficulties than these same Poles and Czechs. I've had the privilege of studying both these hardy folk at first hand in their happier days of independence, and wouldn't want to be the individual who tried to make them a subject people. The history of both, right back through the centuries, is a never-say-die struggle for racial freedom.

Conclusion: Nazidom has cut out a lot of anguish for itself.

Moral: When you have evolved a grand policy, such as keeping clear of minority problems, it's a good thing to stick to it.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Pennsylvania Motor Police and members of local constabularies throughout the state are back on the job after attending a "crime clinic" at which criminologists, college professors and members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were instructors. The clinic was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Chiefs of Police Association.

BARRE, Mass. — Administration of poor relief was auctioned by the town of Barre back in 1788. Early records uncovered by the WPA Historical Records survey disclosed that the town voted "to sell the poor at Publick Auction to the lowest bidder for one year at so much per week."

Kickoff—2:30 p. m., Reilly stadium.

Officials—Russell Rupp, Lebanon Valley; Dr. Dave Reese, Denison; Russ Finsterwald, Ohio university; Clayton Schlemmer, Akron U.

The practice sessions are over. No more hitting the dummy, no more blocking, no more tackling.

Tomorrow afternoon Coach Carl Schroeder's Quakers face their ancient rivals, Alliance, at Reilly stadium, in the 43rd renewal of one of the oldest gridiron feuds in the state. It will be the final game of the season for both teams.

When Quaker warriors block tomorrow, it won't be practice. On every block will depend the success of their ball carrier. When they tackle, it had better be for keeps, or valuable yards will be lost. They won't be "practice" yards.

Thus Quaker gridders grimly look to the big battle tomorrow. In view of comparative scores and season's records, the Salem lads go into the fray as the underdogs; but sometimes even underdogs have been known to get mad once in a while, turn around and kick the stuffing out of their tormentors.

When Dr. George Wilcoxen's Aviators take off at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow on the local lot, they'll figure, by their own system of mathematics, to be at least two touchdowns better than the Quakers.

Coach Carl Schroeder, who realizes he has one of the season's toughest games on his hands, will not, however, yield any touchdowns, or points, until after the game is over. Barring breaks, he feels that this Salem team, in its last game of the campaign, is going to produce one of its best performances—and that will be necessary in order to attain any degree of success.

Quakers Trail In Total

In the 42 games the two teams have played to date, beginning away backs in 1896, the Aviators have won 21, the Quakers 15. Six have been ties.

The Aviators have piled up their margin of superiority in the last 10 years. Salem had the edge in the early years.

The Quakers produced consistent winners back in those days before the Spanish-American war when turtleback sweaters and handlebar mustaches were all the rage. Perhaps they should be recalled. A touchdown then gave you five points and you had to kick for the extra one. Passes were not in order.

Maybe the Quakers might pray for sub-zero weather because, remember, it was one of those kind of days back in 1929 when Salem last won a football game from Alliance.

Alliance Fans Remember

Alliance fans remember the day well, and bitterly. Many of them never got any farther, by automobile, than Blackburn hill. Other belated arrivals got into the stadium in the second half to find their Aviators trailing, 7 to 0, and that's the way it ended.

It was a great ball club the Quakers had that year. They spotted Niles two touchdowns and beat them 26 to 14. They gave Canton McKinley a pair of touchdowns in the first half and came back to win 14 to 12.

Alliance coaches are doing everything possible to keep the Aviators from overconfidence because, regardless of records, it's another Salem-Alliance ball game. Six Salem seniors will be playing their last game and, in view of that fact, it is likely that all

Best Grid Teams Come From Colleges With Small Income

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Figures from the United States office of education indicated today that the best college football, with a few exceptions, is being played by colleges with attendance and income well below the giants of the educational world.

Only two schools on this week's Associated Press rankings of the first 10 teams are among the 10 biggest or richest institutions. Among these football elite, only Ohio State university is in the federal list of 10 schools with the largest enrollment.

Only the University of Iowa held a place in the 10 reporting the largest 1938-39 income. Four hundred institutions had been pooled on that subject by the education office.

The government figures on enrollment showed these schools to be the 10 largest in approximately the following order:

College of the City of New York, New York university, Columbia university, University of California,

University of Minnesota, Northwestern university, University of Illinois, Ohio State, Brooklyn college and the University of Michigan.

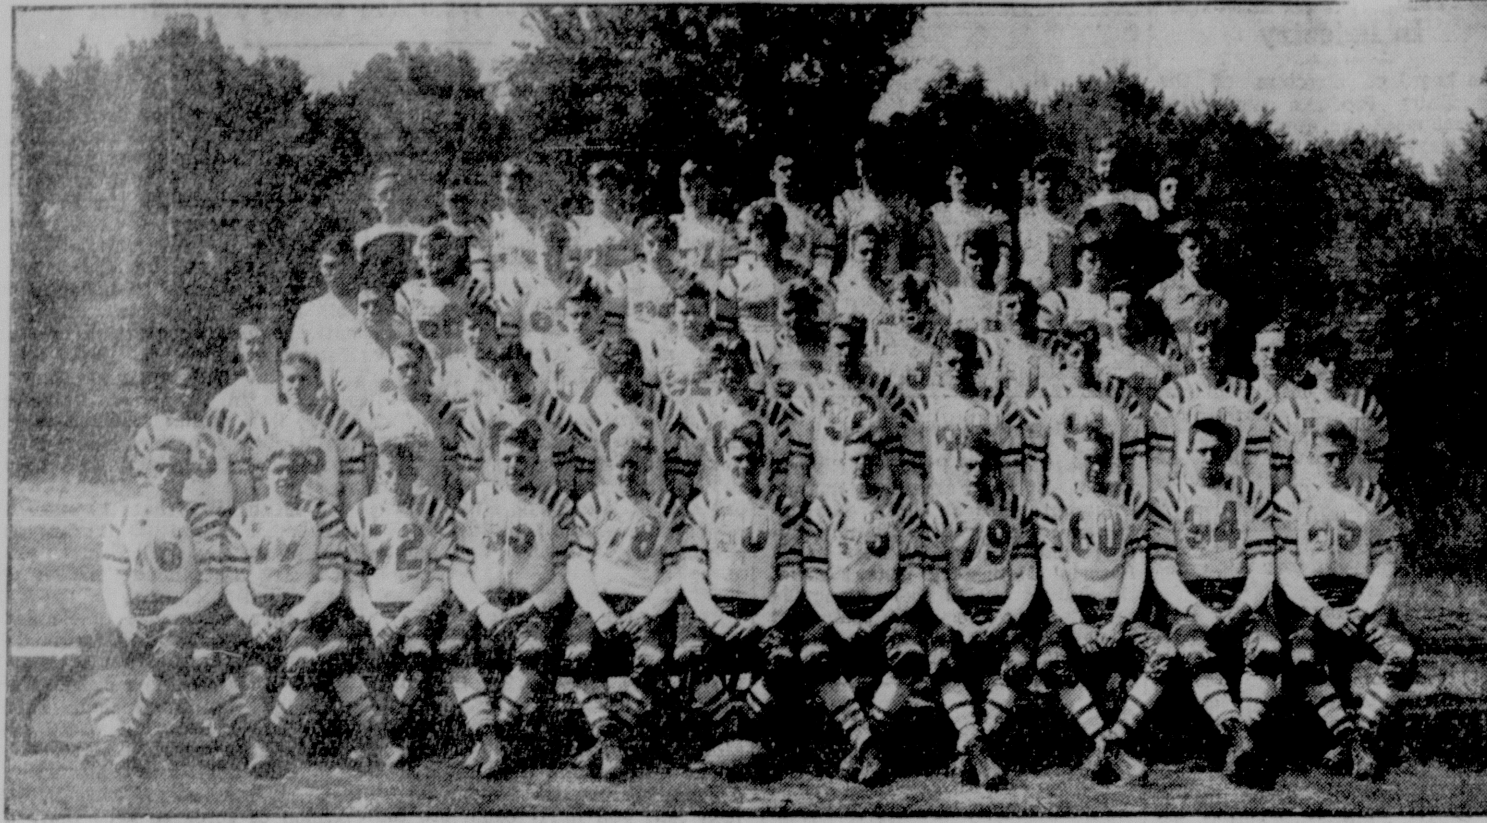

Here were the first 10 with respect to 1938-39 income for educational and general purposes:

Harvard university, $11,184,317; University of Chicago, $8,923,398; New York university, $8,575,336; Michigan, $7,556,444; Indiana university, $3,399,976; Iowa, $3,684,683; University of Washington, $3,007,632; John Hopkins university, $2,955,769; University of Texas, $2,600,000; University of Virginia, $2,523,361.

The current gridiron leaders in The Associated Press poll had the following 1935-36 enrollment, the latest for which federal figures are available:

Texas A. and M. 3,430 (all men); Tennessee, 3,370; Cornell university, 5,506; Southern California, 5,974; Tulane, 3,302; Ohio State, 11,417; Notre Dame, 2,751 (all men); Duke, 3,202; Iowa, 6,432; Missouri, 4,291.

DOCTOR THINKS FOOTBALL SAFE

"I Let My Own Son In Game," Says Stanford U. Physician

(By Associated Press)

PALO ALTO, Nov. 22.—After 12 years of diagnosing and treating Stanford's football injuries, Dr. E. F. "Fritz" Roth answers the question "Shall I let my son play football?" with:

"Why, sure! He is playing football."

Dr. Roth's son, "Fritz, Jr.," plays tackle for the Palo Alto High school team. "Football is safe," said the medico who has been the Stanford team physician since 1927. "I would a lot rather have my son scrimmaging in his spare time after school than running around on the highways in some kid's rattletrap. Besides, he comes home tired at night and goes to bed."

Dr. Roth gives his side of the oft-asked question in this month's issue of the Stanford Illustrated Review, alumni magazine.

The Palo Alto physician, who calls his work at Stanford a hobby, contends "There is no such thing as an 'athletic heart.' While a man plays football his heart does become enlarged—walls thicken with muscle and the organ pumps more blood. But the heart reverts to normal without injury when football days are over."

As a rule, Stanford football players are healthier than the average student, the Doctor contends. Looking back over the years to 1915, the year he was graduated from Stanford, Roth says he can remember no football injury here that left a permanent effect.

Good coaching can help reduce the injury list. A coach who teaches his men the correct way to tackle and take hard bumps will have the minimum of injuries says Roth.

in the city. L. P. Kulka of Alliance, the other purchaser, offered $30 to aid the repair of the Benton road crossing and council accepted.

Three property owners filed a petition seeking abandonment of Euclid st., between S. Broadway and S. Ellsworth ave., which council has been seeking, as a means of extending plans for a storm water sewer improvement in the area.

B. W. Edgerton, acting in behalf of N. Madison ave. property owners, filed a petition asking the release by the city auditor of funds paid by some of the residents for the proposed McKinley Heights sewer project which was rejected several months ago by the WPA, due to lack of federal funds. The matter was turned over to the claims committee.

Act on Seventh St.

Councilman John C. Litty recommended the installation of one or two lights in the alley at the rear of stores on the south side of downtown E. State st., between S. Lincoln and S. Lundy avenues. John Auld appeared before council to ask the city to make W. School st., between Seventh and Eighth sts., more passable for vehicular traffic.

A group of Seventh st. property owners personally appealed to council to see that their street was next on the list for paving under the city's blanket street project. Brooklyn ave. and Mount st. are now being improved.

Their request was granted following introduction of a motion by Councilman C. P. Zimmerman and Charles Rheutan. There had been some talk of improving Railroad st. before Seventh st. since a sewer must first be laid on the latter thoroughfare.

The claim of Henry Schult's for alleged property damage caused by a grass fire in the West End park vicinity on Nov. 10 was read by the clerk and referred to the claims committee. Schult said the fire reached his property, destroying about 25 fence rails, two hay stacks and damaged two apple trees. He requested a cash settlement but did not specify the amount.

Elected to 2 Jobs; Doesn't Want Either

EAST LIVERPOOL, Nov. 22.—Albert Ziegler of Wayne township was elected to two jobs at the Nov. 7 election but doesn't want either one. He so advised the board of elections today.

He was elected Wayne township justice of the peace and constable via a write-in campaign by friends and the election board asked him to decide between the two posts.

In Washington township, James Robbs won over James Scott for constable on the toss of a coin. Each received 22 write-in votes.

OHIO SOLDIERS JOIN WAR PLAY

National Guardsmen Battle Mythical Enemy Next Five Days

(By Associated Press) COLUMBUS, Nov. 22.—Ohio's national guardsmen, 10,000 strong, went to "war" today.

Troop trains and army trucks rolled throughout the state, carrying soldiers to camps for five days of maneuvers.

Upward of 3,500 officers and men were concentrated at the state fairgrounds and Ohio State university here, preparatory to launching an offensive against a mythical enemy in northwest Columbus Friday.

Brig. Gen. Frank D. Henderson commanded the troops at the fairgrounds and Maj. S. P. Dunkle the unit at the university.

Adj. Gen. Gilson D. Light, in charge of the state-wide maneuvers, said troops concentrated at Cincinnati, Georgetown and Xenia would stage an offensive in that region the same afternoon. Col. John A. Blount was in command of those troops, cooperating with air forces and artillery.

Guardsmen also were sent to Athens under Col. Leo Kreber and to St. Marys under Maj. A. F. Ptak. Troops undergoing training at Camp Perry will launch a large scale battle Saturday.

The training, to continue through Thanksgiving day, will conclude Sunday. The war department ordered the maneuvers as part of its expanded program.

General Light did not overlook the fact that the men must work tomorrow—he ordered 10,000 pounds of turkey to bolster the soldiers with a Thanksgiving day feast.

TAKES UP SHIP ON SOLO FLIGHT

Miss Dorothy McCandless Achieves Long-Sought Ambition

have to be developed, she believes, before women can take much active part in it.

Like all young people interested in flying, she has watched in recent months the part aviation is playing in the European conflict, taking particular note of the place women have found in wartime flying. In England, she points out, girl pilots are used to carry government officials, workers, commanders of various defense and departmental units from one part of the country to another. There women are proving themselves of great value for they can now fill jobs which took men from more urgent tasks in the last war.

"Incurable Disease" The flying-bug, it seems, is like the theatrical bug—once it bites, the disease is incurable. It is contagious, Dorothy admits, "that keeps you at it. You think you will just get your solo license and then you keep on, to get your private permit, then your limited commercial and the first thing, you are trying for commercial flying."

Dorothy expects to keep on with her instruction and flying as long as possible, but probably only for her own enjoyment, after she has completed tests for her license.

Her instruction was taken as in the case of most flying students, a little at a time, whenever she had time and could get a ship. The first half-hour's instruction, she recalls, was devoted to learning to bank in case your child haven't brought you up properly or you haven't seen the right moves, that means learning to tilt the ship sideways as in rounding a curve.

From that point on, it appears, the student learns that the ship has a throttle, a brake, rudders, wheel and—whatever else they have. One thing they are taught early in the game is to use their feet to steer the ship, and not their hands, as in driving a car. Apparently fliers have to take the hard way and so they put the steering apparatus where the only things that can reach them are the feet.

Little by little, the student learns to take the ship up, put it through its paces and bring it down, all in one piece, of course. There's no point to bringing a ship down by mere gravitation, because it's fairly certain that the pilot won't be in any frame of mind to note the mistake and the ship probably will need its face lifted.

Dorothy has made no long trips by plane to speak of, except for a flight with her instructor to Ellwood City, Pa., once to visit relatives. She says she intends to stick close to the home port for a while, now that she has soloed, until she learns to locate her course a little more readily.

Those who have flown at all know that when you get up there a ways, the familiar roads and buildings and fields take on the pattern of neatly blocked quilts, with their size greatly reduced and their shape sharply outlined. Those who have flown a great deal, the student points out, learn to recognize landmarks to give them their position and chart their course. They learn to get their directions from the way fields run and the way the fences are put up.

It is hard, in the early stages of training, Dorothy says, to judge distance, since the speed of the plane is much greater than is at first recognized, making it easy to overshoot the landing field or to judge the amount of time needed to cover a certain distance.

Has Other Interests Dorothy spends much of her spare time taking her instruction, but she has other interests which keep her busy. A pianist and vocalist of considerable talents, she has studied music for a number of years.

Her vocal instructor feels that she has a future ahead in music, her voice displaying an appealing lyrical quality which adds color and brilliancy to her numbers. Horseback riding is one of her pleasantest pastimes in the summer. She loves animals and has several pets including three Persian cats, and a Boston bulldog named Cricket. She has traveled extensively with her family and hopes to continue traveling, perhaps by plane after completing her instruction.

British Busses Save on Gas

Imitating Germany's "ersatz" campaign of using substitutes and to conserve Britain's relatively scarce and war-needed gasoline supply, British scientists have evolved a special gas producer which converts low grade coal into gas to drive trucks and busses. The "producer" is shown here mounted on a special trailer as it supplies gas to run one of London's double-deck busses.

Theatre Attractions

Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda are co-starred in the pioneer drama, "Drums Along the Mohawk" which shows at the State theater Thursday, Thanksgiving day, Friday and Saturday.

The story concerns a pioneer couple, settling in the Mohawk valley, who are forced to fight shoulder to shoulder against the savage onslaught of Iroquois. Miss Colbert as an aristocratic city-bred girl marries Fonda, farmer colonist of the Mohawk valley.

He takes her to the rough frontier settlement where her spirit is almost broken by the hardships and crude life. She learns to fight with other pioneer women when the Indians, incited by the British who were opposing American revolutionary troops, attack the colony.

Brilliant direction and playing make the picture good entertainment while the technicolor, fast action and colorful settings add much to the finished production. Concluding tonight at the State is the delightful comedy of youth and errors, "What a Life!", featuring Jackie Cooper and Betty Field in a story of a boy whose good intention only brought trouble.

Tonight and Thursday at the Grand is "20,000 Men a Year", a story of the college youth of the nation, who are taking to the air

THANKSGIVING FORERUNNERS OF A MIGHTY CIVILIZATION

It took initiative and courage to do what the Pilgrims did to settle in a wilderness. It also took hard work. Those three qualities triumphed, however, and the roots of a nation took hold—grew—and flourished. Among all the other things we have to be thankful for, let's not omit those intrepid men and women that started this country.
